Section A Employers' Liability

Guidance notes

This section explains the cover available if an employee claims against you, for injury to them arising out of their work.

This section explains when and where the Employers' Liability cover applies. There is cover in the UK and for temporary visits overseas.

We do not cover overseas medical expenses which are more properly covered under a suitable travel insurance policy. Please refer to your insurance adviser if you need advice about this.

If an employee is injured at work by somebody else and the other person doesn't pay the court award that your employee gets from them, we will cover it.

Under all contracts some situations are not covered. Please read this section carefully to make sure you understand what cover is not included in your own insurance.

These exceptions are specific to Section A Employers' Liability but please see 'General Exceptions' because those also apply.

The cover we provide satisfies the requirements of the UK law on Employers' Liability insurance. Because of the law we might have to pay a claim, even if you have not kept to the conditions of the insurance. If this happens you might have to pay us back.
